ATLANTA, September 8, 2010—Atlantic Trust, the private wealth management division of Invesco Ltd. (NYSE: IVZ), today announced the addition of Logan Allin to the newly created position of Head of Strategy and Client Experience.

“The addition of Logan underscores our commitment to accelerate the strides we are making to enhance our client experience,” said Jack Markwalter, Atlantic Trust chairman and CEO. “Our top priority is to equip our teams with the resources they need to provide the highest quality client service.”

Allin brings more than a decade of wealth and asset management consulting and industry experience to his role. This background will be valuable as his near-term focus will be the development of a vision and strategic plan around the firm’s client and advisor experience, underpinned by an enhanced operations and technology platform. Allin will work closely with Invesco operations and technology leaders, adding a strategic, high net worth perspective to their discussions.

“Over time, we also expect Logan to be involved in other strategic initiatives, such as helping Atlantic Trust capitalize on opportunities in the family office, foundation and endowment channels,” added Markwalter.

Allin is based in Atlantic Trust’s Newport Beach, California, office and reports to Jack Markwalter.

Previously, Allin was a senior vice president in City National Bank’s wealth management division. He spent much of his career consulting to large global financial service and private wealth management firms through his leadership positions at PricewaterhouseCoopers LLC, EMC Corporation Consulting and Capgemini.

Allin earned a Bachelor of Arts in public policy and political science from Duke University. He sits on the Advisory Board of the Family Office Association and is actively involved in several community and charitable organizations nationally.
